

25 YEAR RE-REVIEW

Long Seeks to Prohibit U.S. Snooping Into Wail

By Paul A. Schuette Washington Post Staff Writer

Sen Edward V Long (D mail of a delinquent taxpayer Vissouri) said yesterday he if the IRS Commissioner perwill sponsor legislation prohib-sonally approves use of the iting Government agencies procedure: from snooping into first-class Gronouski said in the letter mails without a search, war-that both he and Secretary of committee-heard Post Office seizure by the IRS. The further we get into in response to levies issued this investigation," said Long, over the past three years. the more I, am impressed snoop into first-class, sealed Hall (R-Misouri).

The subcommittee had a let-John A. Gronouski saying that mail "levies" by the IRS were stopped last August by agreement with the Treasury Department. 🗀 😘

The agreement would permit the agency to claim the the Treasury Henry Fowler Long was less than satisfied would support legislation exafter his Senate Judiciary sub- empting mail from property officials defend the legality, He also gave the subcombut not the practice, of seimittee a list of 34 businesses zures of first-class mail by the Internal Revenue Service had been delivered to the IRS

The subcommittee, which with the idea that the Post earlier this year probed mail Office Department should de-cover operations by the Post liver the mail and not pry Office Department, reopened to it It is deplorable that its investigation after disclotwo of our great departments sure of the IRS mail seizures would stoop so low as to by Representative Durward G.

Hall told the subcommittee yesterday that he has received ter from Postmaster General "unevaluated" information that other agencies also are snooping into the mail. Postal officials deny this. Hall said he would check the reports before passing them along to the subcommittee.

Chief Postal Inspector Henry B. Montague was questioned by Long about his testimony last February in which he assured the subcommittee that "the seal on a first-class piece of mail is sacred."

Montague said he still stands by his assertion that first-class mail is secure against illegal search and seizure. IRS mail levies, he said, are not illegal.

Long suggested that Montague had misled the subcommittee. IRS officials will be called later to testify on the mail seizures, he said.

